Two races for county offices were the outstanding features of interest locally in the election of last Tuesday.

The closest race was that for County Treasurer. A careful check up of the vote shows the following:

J. J. Droicourt 1226
Oscar J. Bader 1227
Majority for Bader 1

In the three-cornered race for Tax Assessor the vote was as follows:

Lou E. Heath 1058
Frank M. Finger 992
Oscar J. Saathoff 440
Plurality for Heath 66

In the Commissioner's race in Precinct No. 1, H. F. Buss defeated Alvin Mumme.

The other officers had no opposition.

Judge H. E. Haass, whose name was not printed on the ballot, received a large vote over the county, the voters writing his name in, and was elected County Attorney to succeed D. C. Brown, who has moved out of the county.

Medina County went Democratic, both Sterling for Governor and Garner for Congress winning over Taft and Watson, their Republican opponents.

Over the state the Amendments seem to have carried.

Nationally the Democrats made great gains, and Judge Garner of this district may realize his ambition to be speaker of the house.

Owing to the crowded condition of our space and pressure for time a tabulated report of local returns will not be published until later.

FAIR OPENS TOMORROW.

As we go to press signs are in evidence all over town of preparations for the Medina County Fair, which opens here Saturday, November 8, with a grand parade and which will continue for four days, 8, 9, 10 and 11, offering many and varied attractions for young and old, both day and night, in exhibits, horse races, rodeo features, carnival attractions, football and basketball games, dances and the queen's coronation and ball.

Plans are in the making for bigger and better exhibits than ever before, and larger crowds are expected than in previous years.

Elsewhere in this paper you will see a booster page for the Medina County Fair which was made possible by most of the business houses in town. When you've finished reading the fair program thereon, look at the spaces purchased by the loyal advertisers and return the courtesy by patronizing them during and after the fair.

Mr. Milton Kothmann, 24, of San Antonio, a brother of Mrs. Leroy Eckhart of this place and who has been in a very critical condition following an automobile accident on the Austin highway Saturday, is reported to be in a more favorable condition after undergoing two operations in an Austin hospital. Mr. Kothmann received a broken hip and internal injuries and for several days it was feared for his life.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Jungman visited Hon. and Mrs. A. J. Johnson at Carrizo Springs Sunday. Mr. Jungman brought home some fine tangerines and oranges pulled from trees in Mr. Johnson's citrus orchard. Mr. Jungman was favorably impressed by the possibilities of citrus fruit growing in that part of the State.

Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Maier and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Koch of San Antonio were here Wednesday to attend the Koch-Garteiser wedding.

Mr. H. Shoor was a business visitor in San Antonio Thursday.

P. T. A. PLAY SUCCESS.

The clever burlesque on doctors and their art, "A Howling Success," sponsored by the local P. T. A., Friday night at the high school auditorium and presented by several business men of Hondo, was quite a roaring success, as displayed by the reaction of the audience.

Among the clever interpretations, Frank Rucker was outstanding as representing a girl of the giddy type; Glenn Fluker, as the petite, shy little miss, and Emmett Kollman as Knock-kneed Sal, the ugly duckling who wanted to be beautiful. The genuine mother types were J. G. Newton and Henry Crow. Let us include the black mammy, R. W. Speece, whose mother heart ached to see the suffering of her children. The misunderstanding father, Mr. Kollman, is not to be neglected, as he was present to discover why Peck had a bad boy in the person of J. G. Barry.

Twins were well represented in Jerome Foster, Ben Oefinger, Glenn Fluker and Henry Merriman and who were as much alike as two peas. Let us not forget the noted doctors, Windrow, Kollman and Gaudian, who in fact were the center of the plot, performing such wonders in surgery and medical science, from teeth extraction to making hair grow on bald heads. They are to be congratulated for having both efficient and beautiful nurses who still know how to blush.

The evening's entertainment was rounded to a perfect conclusion with a harmonica specialty number by Benny Crow; a jig by Muriel Stiegler; "Glow worm" dance by little Misses Bettye Jean Merriman, Mary Elizabeth Meyer, Mary Ann Noonan, Margaret Ann and Evelyn Knopp, in pastel pajamas; and a song duet by Misses Thelma Wilson and Margaret Dillon. The entire acting personnel closed the program with a song.

A large crowd from Hondo D'Hanis and Dunlay attended the play and the sum of $70.00 was cleared by the Parent-Teacher Association.

A CARD.

We take this method of thanking our many friends in Hondo for their loyalty and friendship as well as for their many acts of kindness shown unto us during our very pleasant stay of three years in your midst. We will ever hold you in pleasant memory, and pray God's blessings upon you in the future.

Yours truly,
REV. and MRS. M. WILLIAMSON.

LUZ ARCOS EXECUTED

CONDEMNED MAN EXPIATED
HIS CRIMES IN ELECTRIC CHAIR EARLY THIS MORNING.

Luz G. Arcos paid with his life the penalty society exacts for the crime of murder shortly after midnight last night in the electric chair at Huntsville. The crime for which Arcos died was the shooting to death of Joe Barrientes on Christmas night, 1928. Barrientes lived just long enough to make a dying statement fixing the guilt on Arcos. At the same time Joe Barrientes was killed his father, L. Barrientes, and his brother, Candelario Barrientes, were killed instantly, and two murder charges for these crimes are still standing undisposed of on the district court docket here.

The latest newspaper report was the following Associated Press dispatch:

HUNTSVILLE, Tex., Nov. 6.—Denied further clemency, Luz C. Arcos, convicted slayer of Joe Barrientes, Hondo grocer, who was killed along with his father and his brother, in an affray over a bottle of assertedly sour milk, will be executed early tomorrow for murder.

Arcos' lawyer made a final plea to Governor Moody at Austin today, but the Executive was quoted as having said he had no intention of intervening again. The convicted slayer already had been granted three respites and had been given a sanity hearing. The Barrientes was shot on Christmas Day, 1928.

Arcos' wife, his 8-year-old daughter and a brother, all from Houston, visited him today. Prison officials reported he was "acting quietly."

At ten o'clock Thursday night, Judge Haass heard over the radio that Arcos was being prepared for his last journey, and early this morning C. R. Gaines caught the news that the execution took place shortly after midnight.

BAPTIST T. E. L. CLASS ENTERTAINS.

The ladies of the T. E. L. Class entertained with a Halloween party in honor of their husbands on Thursday night, October 30, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Dillon. The large reception rooms were decorated with vases of cosmos, the Halloween motif being carried out in decorations and other details. When the guests had arrived a plate lunch consisting of creamed turkey in patties, frozen fruit salad, hot rolls, pumpkin pie and coffee were served, after which several games of 42 were played.

The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Beal, Mr. and Mrs. Earnest, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Fusselman, Mr. and Mrs. Roland Gaines, Dr. and Mrs. T. B. Knopp, Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Kollman, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Meister, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Crow, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Dillon, Mr. and Mrs. Neul Woolls, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Hyatt, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Dillon, Rev. and Mrs. Albert Nelson, Mrs. F. L. McWilliams, Mrs. L. E. Kollman, Mrs. Elsie Warden, Misses Fanye Carle and Margaret Dillon and Mr. Don Windrow.

LADIES' BRIDGE CLUB.

Mrs. Ed. Convey was hostess to a charming bridge party, Thursday afternoon, at the home of her sister, Mrs. Earl Boon, entertaining the Ladies' Bridge Club and several guests. The Halloween season was featured by an attractive arrangement of cosmos and pot plants in the living room. Three tables were arranged for bridge.

Mrs. F. H. Schweers won high score among the members, Mrs. Alfred Schweers won high among the guests and Miss Lillian Brucks cut for consolation.

A delectable salad course was served to the following: Mesdames Horace Bradley, O. H. Miller, O. B. Taylor, F. H. Schweers, W. O. Rothe, Felix Kussenberger, Alfred Schweers, Earl Boon and Misses Sue Heatly, Lillian and Bess Brucks, Vera Lee Cook and the hostess, Mrs. Convey.

NEW CHEVROLET SIX POWERED WITH GULF GASOLINE WILL BE USED IN EXHIBITION

Paul, the exponent of Par Optic Vision and traveler of considerable renown, will be in Hondo Monday, November 10, to perform his famous and spectacular blindfold feat. In this feat Paul does everything that seems impossible. While blindfolded with twenty-two folds of black cloth so that he cannot see he will proceed to drive a new Chevrolet Six roadster all about the streets of this city. He will observe all traffic regulations. He will stop for stop signs and negotiate full turns at intersections. He will tell the time correctly by your watch and in fact do everything that would seem impossible if you didn't see it accomplished with your own eyes.

Paul's feat promises to be one of the most spectacular and amazing ever to be presented to the local public and will be shown absolutely free. In explaining his feat to Mr. Dillon, local Chevrolet agent, Paul said that it was an accomplishment rather than a gift and that it has come to him only after years of hard study and concentration. He lays no claim to the super-natural whatsoever.

Paul said that "my audiences are usually composed of two classes of people, those who believe that I possess super-natural powers and those who believe my feat to be accomplished by trickery or deception. Of the two classes I would much prefer to have everyone in the latter class as I do not come down here with the purpose of insulting anyone's intelligence by telling them that I possess super-natural powers. Neither can anyone else have those powers. I am only human, the same as anyone else, and as no human is infallible, I am as apt to be in error as anyone. However, I will say that in all my drives not once has my science failed me. I claim that ninety per cent of my actions will be correct. If you must think that I am a faker, at least give me credit for being a good one."

Paul will be blindfolded promptly at 1 o'clock Monday afternoon in front of the Dillon Motor Company's showrooms and then will drive about the city and the drive will end at the fair grounds, where the blindfold will be removed.

Mr. Dillon, in commenting on Paul's choosing the Chevrolet to make the drive, stated that it was just one more proof of Chevrolet's supremacy. Paul said that the steering ease and quick braking power made it a pleasure to drive the new Chevrolet Six. The Chevrolet will be equipped with those long wearing Federal Tires and the tank will be full of that Good Gulf Gasoline.

Mr. Schweers, local Gulf agent, was elated over Paul's choice of Gulf Gasoline and Supreme Motor Oil and says that he has been trying to tell the people all the time about the high quality of Gulf Products and now Paul comes along and proves it.

Don't forget the time, 1 o'clock Monday afternoon, and be sure and be there as it will be well worth your time. It is free.

KONJOLA VERY MEDICINE THAT FIT THIS CASE.

Amarillo Lady Rejoices Over Result Obtained from New and Different Compound.

MRS. ETTER STANLEY

"For twenty years I tried to free myself of stomach trouble, constipation, kidney and liver trouble," said Mrs. Etter Stanley, 1220 West Fifth street, Amarillo. "Even specially prepared foods did not digest. Gases formed and bloating pains resulted. My kidneys were so weak that night risings were frequent. I had dull pains across my back, Neuritis gripped me and I became almost helpless at times and suffered untold agony from piercing pains."

"Konjola seemed to just fit my case. Soon after starting the treatment I began to feel better. Now, after finishing the treatment, I feel like another person. Food now digests as it should and I feel better than in years. The pains of neuritis are rapidly leaving me. My kidneys have been strengthened and function properly. I am gaining in weight and strength."

It is the same glad story whenever Konjola is given a real test. Try this medicine for ailments of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, and rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness.

HOW OLD ARE YOU?

This Is The Date I'm 48

My Mind Is Keen—My Skin Is Clear—Of Petty Ills I Have No Fear.

No doubt about it—I am 48 and never felt better in my life—I feel like 30 and you can take my word for it—It's the little Daily Dose of Kruschen That Does It.

Once I was fat and forty—had headaches a plenty—Was tired out most of the time—My liver was sluggish and my bowels inactive—I searched for a real remedy and by good fortune I found it in Kruschen Salts.

Fat isn't healthy—so Physicians state and I want to say to this world full of fat people—that the Kruschen Method of losing fat is safe, sure and sensible—Just cut out sweets, pies, pastries and ice cream for a month—go light on potatoes, rice, butter, cream and sugar—and don't forget to take one half a teaspoon water before breakfast every morning.

I wish I could induce every overweight person on earth to try this splendid method—It surely doesn't cost but a trifle—for an 85 cent bottle lasts 4 weeks and can be bought at W. H. Windrow's or any drug store in the world—Get it—Grow Thin—Feel younger.

CARELESSNESS THE CAUSE OF FIRES.

"Carelessness" still prevails as the leading cause of all fires, and it is only within the power of the people themselves to eliminate this cause. When the people have learned to be more careful with fire and the many things that are so likely to cause a fire, we will see a great reduction in the fire losses of this State.

It is very important that the home should be kept safe from fire, and it is possible to do this by observing a few simple rules as follows.

1. Keep matches in closed metal container and out of reach of children. See that they are extinguished before leaving your hand.

2. Keep all gas lights and open flame away from woodwork or other material that will burn.

3. Always disconnect the electrical iron, toaster, heater or other electrical appliances from the socket when not using them.

4. Watch the gas stove. Do not use rubber gas connections.

5. Keep floor mats in metal containers and do not place them in the closet.

6. Do not start fire with coal oil, benzine or gasoline.

7. Gasoline should not be used for cleaning purposes.

8. Remove all rubbish and refuse matter. Keep the attic and basement clean.

9. Keep flues and chimneys clean.

PITY THE POOR TEACHER.

Many parents whose children have come home from school with poor marks fail to appreciate how difficult it is for a teacher, no matter how willing she may be, to give very high percentages in all cases.

The Washington Post some time ago gave the following quotation from school examination papers in Baltimore, Maryland. If you were a teacher, how would you mark such answers?

"A blizzard is the inside of a head."

A circle is a round straight line with a hole in the middle.

George Washington married Mary Curtis and in due time became the father of his country.

A mountain range is a large cooking stove.

Achilles was dipped in the river Styx to make him normal.

Pompeii was destroyed by an eruption of saliva from the Vatican.

Typhoid fever is prevented by vaccination.

Sixty gallons make one hedges.

Georgia was founded by people who had been executed."

TEXAS AND TEXANS.
By
Will H. Mayes
"All Texans for All Texas"

Inviting Business Slumps
I have before me the same week's of three of the best small-weekly papers in Texas, the Rockdale Reporter, the Eagle Lake Advertiser and the Elgin Courier, all of which are of unusual ability, and have spent their lives in news-work and who are doing their best to help build up the business interests of their towns.

The Rockdale Reporter's local business consisted of a few small ads, one of which quoted prices and were enameled with offerings
"Saturday" only. A dry goods advertiser would sell a broom for one cent to any one who would pay for a line of merchandise, named but not priced.

The Eagle Lake Advertiser carried less advertising and in a front editorial stated that "Local advertising has been withdrawn altogether and curtailed to such an extent that its present standard could no longer be maintained, but that it would have to be reduced to four pages."

The Elgin Courier, on the other hand, was crammed full of well-written, price-offering ads, telling just how little they would pay for goods bought in grocery stores. Editor Smith has an offer that if any subscriber would read the Courier's advertising for a year and try to profit from them, and would then come in and he had not saved more than the paid for subscription he would refund the $1.50 and add another $1.50 to the refund to pay for trouble.

There is little or no complaint of times at Elgin. The merchants evidently have learned that who make money must advertise their goods and they quote trade prices every week. Other people are doing it, too, and getting business. With good roads and autos running in every direction people are not to be blamed for leaving home or traveling farther to buy from merchants who carry better goods and quote the best prices.

Not of the so-called "business" complaint comes from those still hoping to do business on roads that progressive mercantile overboard a half century or
ago. The business average throughout the country is about as it has been for several years,
the trade is going to the towns and cities that are seeking it most.
You blame it? "Keeping ever-ready at it" makes business.

Nothing Wrong Except The Alice Echo says Jim Wells
never was in better condition now, with more money in banks, more dairy cows, more better roads, more debts being more improvements in town country.

The Echo adds that there is nothing wrong except the adverse mention caused by "hard time" and that this comes largely from the other sections. This is of two-thirds of Texas. The people with most people is hardship.

He's Not Howling
The Wellington Leader shows a Wellington truck grower
eight bushel baskets of tomatoes just sold from one morning's crop at 5 cents a pound, his car loading a variety of other truck crops brought to town. From one acre of tomatoes he gathered 3,000 pounds every week in September, and them at an average of 5 cents a pound, and he had been gathering pounds from the same acre during July and August. The land is neglected.

Cabbage Brings Money
Cabbage marketed early in this year in Texas has been bringing growers from $170 to $240 an acre. The time has passed when one express contempt for another by calling him a "cabbage head."

Action Is Needed
The folks at Brady are now talking "Flood Prevention," a popular since a large part of the town flooded. Flood prevention and action are measures that should be in hand. Brady should make plans to capture the next flood for irrigation instead of allowing it to damage the town. But movement should be started before the people forget.

Mass Before Hunting
At Albuquerque, which is enough to Texas to be mentioned, early mass has been made before starting out to kill purposely and occasionally and other things accidentally.

Critics Still Carp
Whether overt or covert,
there are plenty of both, have been able to checkmate the flood and reclamation project on Trinity river, according to the News, progress having been faster than anticipated. The critics should be advised to go jump in the river when the next flood gets it deep enough for convenient drowning.

Wearing Texas Clothes
Col. Bill Talbott, Republican candidate for governor, was wearing Texas-made clothes, made from Texas products, while campaigning. Of course he did not expect to be elected, but he was pulling a fine publicity stunt. If he will wear only Texas-made clothes and use only Texas products for the next two years and induce all Texas supporters of Hoover to do the same thing, he will bring an era of Texas prosperity that will sweep him right into the Governor's office. This is a challenge to both parties to start something really worth while in Texas.

Make It in Texas
That Texas will in time become the center of many industries is prophesied by the Dallas News. Yes, but why let those we have starve to death now? Texas has about 25 cotton mills, none of which are running full time because Texans do not give preference to Texas products. Most of the cotton sacks used by Texas cotton pickers are made somewhere
"up North." A New Braunfels mill makes gingham as fine as any in the country, but can't sell all it can make in Texas, because Texans buy Northern-made gingham. The News makes a misstatement when it says
"Texans are eager to buy Texas-made goods when these are known and are of guaranteed quality." They should be, but they are not. Texas needs a thorough awakening on the thought that "What Texas Makes Texas."

Divide It Up
"To have 100 farmers plant 15 acres of watermelons each" next spring, all of the same variety, is pointed out by the DeLeon Press as the greatest need of that section.
It would be better to have 300 plant
5 acres each and plant the remaining 10 acres in some other of the crops, like peanuts. Over-cropping of watermelons is as bad as over-cropping any other single crop.

Unusual Grave Stone
W. E. Gilleland founded the Baird Star some 43 years ago. Before that he had owned the Tecumseh Banner and the Belle Plains Clarendon. He died a few years ago and his family has had a grave stone of unusual design placed at his grave. It is made of two printer's imposing stones, such as are used to make up the newspaper forms on, embedded in a base of concrete, which covers the grave. On top of this is a smaller imposing stone of marble. At the side is a marker of Texas granite.
The concrete base is reinforced by the iron roller cores, and the old Prouty press used 39 years ago was broken up and put inside the concrete foundation. It is just such a structure as would be pleasing to the veteran and stalwart newspaper man, whose convictions were always as firm as this memorial.

YANCEY NEWS.

We were sorry to hear the news that our pastor, Rev. J. H. Estes was transferred to Port Lavaca, after having been with us for two years.
Rev. Estes and family had won the hearts of the congregation and all join in expressing their regret at their leaving. On Tuesday evening the stewards of the church tendered them
a farewell party at the home of Mr.
Anton Hardt. A supper was prepared consisting of barbecued goat and other good eatables, pies, cakes, etc.
The evening passed all too quickly
for those who were present.

On Wednesday afternoon the pastor and his family left for their new place of work. It was their intention to stop over at Jourdanton, where a daughter, Miss Nannie, is teaching.
Preparations are being made for Halloween parties for the different grades at school, and a good time is being anticipated.

Several of the lady teachers spent last week-end in San Antonio.

Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Berry of Brackerville surprised their folks
last Tuesday with a short visit.

Jack Burgin took his mother and Mrs. F. W. Bohmfalk and children to San Antonio last Saturday.

Prof. W. N. Saathoff and family were in Yancey Sunday.

We have seen several candidates
here during the week shaking hands with the voters.

Neal Everette Saathoff had a tonsil operation last week. He got along very nicely and did not miss school
but a few days.

Mr. George Heiligman, manager of the Red and White store, is spending the week in Houston. He was accompanied by his mother, who is visiting her nephew, Rev. E. A.
Konken, at that place.

Mr. J. J. Little of Pearsall was here Wednesday and reports very good rains at his ranch below here.

We had several good showers the past few days and everything is growing nicely.

Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Howard left for Devine Wednesday where they will locate permanently.

ZEN of the Y. D.

A Novel of the Foothills

By ROBERT STEAD

Author of "The Cow Puncher," "The Homesteaders," "Neighbors," etc.

"Yes—in a way I am." (Oh, will anybody ever come?) "But—how did you find me? You know I've been married since then?"

"So you have, and it hasn't spoiled you a bit. Oh, it didn't take me long to run you down. But I didn't go breezin' up to your house, like I might 've done if I hadn't been considerate of you. I didn't want no scandal about it, on your account. So I just laid low for awhile. That is how I found out about Grant."

"About Grant? What did you find out about Mr. Grant?"

He made to draw her closer to him, but she held him at bay. "Oh, you're innocent, ain't you, Zen? What about Grant? That's a good one. Your husband would enjoy that!"

"If you're going to talk to me like this we can't be friends, Mr. Drakz." (Still no sign of help.) "My friends mustn't think evil of me."

Drakz laughed. "They say a friend is one who knows all about you and loves you just the same," he leered. "That's me, Zen. I know all about you—you and this Grant fellow. How he's been visitin' you when your husband was away, and sometimes when the maid was away, too. I've kept pretty close tabs on him. Hasn't been comin' around so often lately. Well, true love never did run smooth. Now I could tell your husband all this, and perhaps I ought to; Transley and me is old friends, worked together for years, but I ain't that kind of a fellow. You see, Zen, I know all about you, and I love you just the same. I love you—just—the same!"

He forced her toward him, and she knew that she had spun out her reprieve to its end. She was in the power of this madman. She tried to break from his grasp, but her efforts were puny and wasted against his passionate strength. She struck out wildly, but he crushed down her blows; wrapped his arms about hers; drew her face to his.

"I came to collect an account, Zen," he hissed, "and now you are goin'—to pay!"

CHAPTER XVIII

Transley, returning by an earlier train than he had expected, found Sarah at the house and Wilson engaged in dialogue with the family pig. The lad, on hearing the motor, rushed to his father's arms.

"Well, well, what a big boy you are!" cried Transley, swinging him up to his shoulders. "And how is your friend Grant?"

"Mother hasn't let me go to see him lately. I don't know why. Ever since the night I slept at his house—"

"You slept at his house? When?"

"The day you went away. And mother was there in the morning—"

"Wilson, where is your mother?"

"I don't know, daddy."

He strode sharply into the house.

"Sarah, where is Mrs. Transley?"

"I don't know, sir," said the maid. Then, frightened out of her reticence by her master's unusual severity—"I think she has gone to the old quarry, sir. She often goes up there of an afternoon."

"A trying-place!" Transley gasped inwardly. He dropped the boy and, in his own room, found a revolver and cartridges. A moment later he was swinging in long, angry steps up the quarry road. Wilson, puzzled by the sudden interruption of his father's greeting, followed at a discreet distance.

"I've suspected—I've suspected," Transley was raging as he walked; "I've suspected—more than I've said. Give 'em enough rope. That's my plan. And now they've taken it. By God, if they have!"

With every step the wrath and horror within him grew. He was at the quarry before he knew it. He paused for a moment to listen. Yes, there were people present. There were sounds—God, it sounded like a fight! Transley rushed in. A man and a woman were reeling in each other's arms. "I hate you! I hate you!" the woman was crying. "You coward! You coward!" The woman was his wife. The man was—Dennison Grant.

Although Transley had a revolver in his pocket it was not his customary weapon, and his thought did not turn naturally to it. In this tremendous moment he forgot it altogether. He rushed upon his wife's assailant, clutching him about the throat.

With the strength of a madman Drakz flung Zen to the ground, where she fell unconscious at his feet. Then he tore himself free from Transley's grip about his throat. The next moment the two men were swaying about in a struggle of death.

As they swung in each other's arms, crushing, choking, clutching at each other's throats, it was slowly forced home upon Transley that his was a losing fight. His assailant had the strength, and, after a hesitating moment of surprise, the ferocity of a lion. He had broken Transley's first grip of advantage about his throat and seemed in momentary prospect of reversing the situation. There were no talk, no cries, no oaths; it was a silent fight save the grunting and panting which became more and more labored as the minutes drew on. In their clutches Drakz's stubbled face rubbed into Transley's well-groomed cheek; his snarling teeth snapped, but missed, at Transley's jaw.

Then it was that Transley remembered his revolver. Breaking Drakz's grip by a superhuman effort, he drew the weapon and fired. The shot went wild, and the next instant Drakz was upon him again. In the struggle the revolver fell from Transley's hand, and both men began fighting toward it. As Drakz's fingers clutched it, Transley kicked his feet from under him, and the two went down together. Rolling about on the rocky floor of the quarry they approached, slowly, unconsciously, the edge of the precipice that fell away to the river.

On the very edge Transley realized this new and hideous danger, and scrambled to his feet, dragging Drakz with him. Drakz realized it, too, and gleefully, fiendishly joined again in the combat, deliberately forcing the fight toward the river.

The Next Moment the Two Men Were Swaying About in a Struggle of Death.

"I've got you, Transley!" he hissed, speaking for the first time since Transley's fingers had clutched about his throat; "I've got you, and you're goin' over there—with me. Zen tried to drown me once; now I'll drown you, if I have to go with you. I've got you, Transley!"

"Drakz!" Transley exclaimed, a light of recognition breaking upon him. "You!"

"Yes, me—Zen's old lover, and you give her to me, or we go out together!"

"You're mad, Drakz, mad!" Transley cried. "Why—"

But at that moment Drakz, by a sudden contort, whipped a knife from his pocket. Transley felt its sting—once, twice, three times; then darkness fell. Zen, recovering from her stun, sat up in time to see her husband staggering in the arms of Drakz.

Half a mile away Dennison Grant had been lazily plowing up and down his prairie field when he suddenly saw Wilson approaching at his topmost speed. Since the night of the storm he had missed the boy tremendously; sometimes he had thought that if only he might have the companionship of Wilson he could be reconciled to the loss of Zen. He knew that a veto had been placed on Wilson's visits, and he bore Zen no ill will; he felt that he understood her motives. But now, as the boy came racing toward him, Grant felt his heart bounding about in an extraordinary manner.

"Why, what's the matter?" Grant cried, as Wilson drew up beside him. "Has something happened to the pig?"

It was a moment before the boy could speak.

"A man—is fighting my father—and shooting at him," he gasped. "And my mother's—dead!"

Grant cleared the plow at a bound. "Where?" he demanded.

"At the old quarry. I ran all the way."

But Grant was already stripping the harness from Prince. The next moment he had flung himself upon the horse's back, and, leaving the boy to follow as he could, was galloping across the prairie to the quarry trail. Under his urging the astonished plow horse developed a quite surprising speed; in a couple of minutes they were on the old road to the quarry, and a moment later horse and rider dashed into the rock-rimmed cut which overhung the river.

Grant's first glimpse was of Zen; she had struggled to her feet; thank God, she was not dead. Then he saw the two men by the edge of the cliff; Transley he recognized; saw the knife rise and strike—

The blow Grant landed in Drakz's face sent that gentleman spinning like a top. Like a top, too, Drakz wobbled at the end of his spin; wobbled over the edge of the precipice, and dropped out of sight.

Grant fell on his knees beside the stricken Transley; leaned over; raised the quivering form in his arms. Zen, beside him, drew the sorely mangled head to her breast and whispered words of endearment into ears soon closing to all mortal sounds.

Presently Transley opened his eyes. They were sane, quiet eyes now; the fight was over; only the eternities lay ahead.

"Grant—tell me one thing," he murmured. "You have been straight—with Zen?"

"As God hears me," Grant answered.

For an instant the eyes of the rivals—and friends—met; rivals no longer; friends only, forever. Then the form of Transley shivered in the arms of Zen and Dennison Grant; shivered, and settled into eternal sleep.

The sun of another summer was flooding the tawny flanks of the foothills when Zen and Dennison Grant rode together over the old trail to the Y. D. Since Transley's death Grant had not spoken to Zen of love; he seemed to know that at the proper time Zen herself would break silence. And now she had asked him to accompany her to her father's home, and to spend a few days roaming their old haunts in the foothills.

Y. D., older, but in unimpaired vigor, greeted him boisterously. "Well, well, you old coyote! Had to come back to the hills! They all do. If I was a young man again I'd get me a herd of heifers an' trek into the back country, spite o' hell an' high water—"

The greeting of the rancher's wife was less effusive, but no less sincere. The evening was spent in hospitality and in a picturesque recounting by the rancher of events in the brave days before barbed wire fences pricked every bubble of romance, and at a late hour it was Zen's own hands that carried Dennison's lamp and guided him to the spare room for the night.

The next afternoon Zen appeared at the gate with horses saddled for two. "Come, Denny, we are going for a ride," she announced, "and in a few minutes their mounts were pounding down the trail which led over the foothills to the South Y. D."

Zen was strangely silent upon their ride, and Grant, after futile attempts to engage her in conversation, was content to ride at her side and admire her horsemanship and her beauty. The suffering and the years had left her strangely unscathed; she seemed to Grant wholly as adorable as on that day of her unspoken confession when they had met at the ford. Soon she must speak! Well, he had waited; he still could wait.

They followed the trail, little changed by all the passage of years, down the slopes to the South Y. D. They forded the river, and Zen swung her horse about in the grove of cottonwoods.

"You remember this spot, Denny?" she asked. "It is where we first met."

"I remember," he said. No, he would not be tempted into a demonstration. She must lead.

The sun was gilding the mountain tops with gold, and gilding, too, Zen's face and hair with beauty ineffable. For a moment she sat in the slanting light like a statue of bronze. For an instant her eyes met his; then fell. She spurred her horse to a plunge and galloped ahead up the valley.

Miles passed, and the quick twilight of the foothills was upon them before she drew up again. This time it was by a great boulder, a sort of flat rock stranded on the sloping shoulder of a hill. Something seemed to burst in Grant's throat as he recognized it—the rock on which they had spent that memorable night so long ago when the world and they were young! Thank God, Zen was young still! Romance burned in her heart—who but Zen would have thought of this?

He sprang from his horse, and she from hers. He approached her with open arms.

"Zen—you have brought me here for a purpose! Don't deny it! I understand!"

She was in his arms. "How well you read one's mind," she murmured. "But oh, how slowly!"

He held her tight. There were words to say, but he could whisper only "Zen—my Zen," into the tangled glory of her hair.

At length she held him gently away. "I believe some one is coming up the trail," she said.

It was true enough; a horse and rider were rapidly approaching. As he skirted the hill he caught sight of them, swung off from the trail and rode up beside them.

"Ah, here you are!" he exclaimed. "Hope I didn't keep you waiting, Mrs. Transley?"

"You are punctuality itself," Zen said, as she took his hand. "You haven't met Mr. Grant? Denny, this is Mr. Munroe—the reverend Mr. Munroe."

"The reverend! What! How! Zen, explain things!"

"Very simple. Mr. Munroe was to meet us here at eight. It's eight o'clock, and here he is."

Zen was unstrapping a kit from her saddle. "I have a document here—if I haven't lost it—which will interest Mr. Munroe. Ah, here it is!"

She produced an envelope, and Mr. Munroe examined the contents. "Seems all in order," he remarked. "A license authorizing the marriage of Dennison Grant and Zenith Transley. This rock should make a very acceptable pulpit. Suppose, Mr. Grant, you take this woman's hand in yours and stand before me?"

It was dark when the minister, having completed the ceremony and shared in the supper which Zen produced from a saddlebag, said a hearty adieu and turned his horse's head down the valley. Dennison and Zen listened to the pounding of hoofs until it died out in the distance. Then the tremendous,

Miss Mamie Halbardier spent the week-end here.

Mr. and Mrs. Eug. Jungman, Sr., and sons, Eug., Jr., and Leo, from the Potranco were here Monday.

Mrs. Arthur Holzhaus and son, Clarence, and daughter, Miss Maude, were San Antonio visitors.

We were sorry to learn that little Miss Clara Biediger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Biediger, had the misfortune to fracture several ribs while playing at school. She was taken to the Santa Rosa Infirmary at San Antonio last Sunday where she underwent an operation. It was found that a point of a broken rib was piercing her liver. We join in wishing the immeasurable silence of the hills wrapped them all about, folded them in its friendly arms, fondled and caressed them on the threshold of their new life.

After awhile the moon came up, white and glorious, as it had that night so many years before.

Quite a number from here attended the Fair in Devine.

The Devine Cow, Sow and Hen Fair, a local Community Fair, was declared by many out of county visitors to have been as good, or even better, than some county fairs they had attended this year.

A heavy rain over the Hondo country and western Medina Thursday kept back many fair visitors, no doubt. But Hondo had a good delegation here; practically all the officers were here, and a number of business men and farmers came. Hundreds from the Devine section will attend the County Fair, over there, of course.

Ten thousand sheep are now being fed at Natalia by the Medina Mills for Messrs. Wardlaw and Whitehead of Del Rio, Texas. These people expect to ship in another three thousand within the next ten days, bringing their total between twelve and fifteen thousand. This is a new enterprise for this part of the country and gives an outlet for feed stuffs which heretofore have brought only fair prices. With a year round growing season for feed crops, we see no reason why this section should not develop several large feed mills and pens. Its proximity to the market, together with the trunk line railroads traversing, make feeding out very practical.

MEDINA LAKE CONTINUES TO RISE.

The rains, which continue to fall two or three times a week now, are steadily filling the Medina Lake, we are told; rising several inches each day, and now spreading over several square miles of area and water front.

IS THE CRISIS ON?

Money is the main leading essential for the success of every enterprise launched in the world.

The money of the world is owned by about two per cent of the population—the other 98 per cent are mere hirelings or money chasers. This two per cent do not own all the property, but they own the money and have power to put it out and call it back as they choose.

This two per cent of owners are using that money, as a rule, for their own benefit regardless of the special welfare of the masses.

The pulpits must preach to suit the two per cent of owners, or they must preach without pay or go out to work.

The journals, magazines and newspapers must write as the money owners like, or else they will write for small returns.

Educational institutions must teach in favor of the money owners, or else their endowment funds will be withdrawn, and the institutions will decline for lack of money.

Labor in all lines must answer uncompaining the beck and call of the money owners, or they must go unemployed, hungry and in rags.

Governments must function as the money owners dictate, or their money will be transferred to other nations, leaving an awful panic behind. That is what is happening to us now. Our money owners are sending their money away to other nations where greater profits are taken, and we are being foreclosed on lands and other property. Congress, backed by our Army, can stay this process if it only will.

These conditions are all deplorable and are irremedial as long as two per cent of the people own and control the medium of exchange which is needed by the other 98 per cent. The 98 per cent must serve the two per cent and poverty is their usual portion.

Whatever may have caused this unequal distribution of money, the only possible relief must come by an increase in the number of money owners—an increase in the circulating medium among the 98 per cent of money chasers.

This 98 per cent of money chasers are supposed to be the governing power of the United States—at least that was said to be according to the Constitution in the beginning of our government.

Through some mis-step in our political machinery, this 98 per cent of people have ceased to function as the governing power. They have been mis-informed and mis-led by the designing two per cent of money owners, until the voice of the masses is silenced or ineffective.

The remedy is for them to arise and take back the power they have lost and take charge of the money creating power, and thus force a larger distribution of money among the workers, and less among the idlers.

The money creating power lies alone in congress, and congress must be made to do the will of the 98 per cent, instead of the will of the 2 per cent now in control.

People must arise and take charge of their political machinery, and elect congressmen who are pledged to create more money, and pay it out for labor and products everywhere and thus relieve the common distress, for thus only can the proportion of men with money be increased and the moneyless chasers be decreased.

What the people want will not come to them, unless they go after it through their congressmen. The last call of duty is now upon us, and we must act, and act soon or opportunity for peaceful existence will soon pass.

We should implore our congressmen to act now, but if they come home to us without the record of an effort to increase the output of money among the people, we should say to them: "Stand aside, you are not our friends—we will elect other representatives."

We must not demand a borrowed interest-taking money, but must have money created and distributed by the government itself and paid out for better wages to workers, and better prices to producers, and thus end the necessity for their borrowing and paying interest to the two per cent of money owners now responsible for our present distress.

FOOD FANCIES IRRATIONAL.

Getting people to eat what's good for them is one of the jobs of the Red Cross nutritionist; according to Ada Brewster, one of this number, the task has many interesting aspects.

Tomatoes, for example, range close to oranges and orange juice in the valuable vitamins they contain, whether fresh or canned. At ten cents a can, in fact, they are a cheap substitute if oranges are not available, or where people cannot afford oranges.

Texans are familiar with tomatoes; raise them in certain sections. The nutritionist relates that in a certain section of Maine however, she found the people were still influenced by the old belief that tomatoes were not exactly wholesome, in some way, if not actually poisonous.

This is not a peculiar instance at all; there are people who do not like beans; others will not eat cheese, or drink milk; molasses, popular in most Southern homes, and used extensively in cooking, is disliked by individuals elsewhere.

"Food fancies are always irrational," Miss Brewster observes. "In English stories, poor folks are always eating periwinkles; we here, will not touch them. The early colonists, fresh from England and oysters, bewailed among other hardships that starvation forced them to eat clams; and apprentices in the old days complained of stingy masters who fed them on fresh salmon. Some children of European ancestry, especially south Europe, grow up stunted because their elders, used to goat's milk dislike that of cows.

"Such limitations may be a serious matter, both dietetically and economically. To be sure, if a family in the Middle West does not like fish, there is no great harm done. But a poor family on the seacoast that indulges the same distaste cuts off forthwith its cheapest source of proteins.

"Where winter is long, one must like all vegetables the market has available. In short, a thrifty soul will like about all sorts of food so that he may profit by the law of supply and demand."

The nutritionist describes the value of learning these lessons early.

"It is really amazing," she states, "at what an early age a child can figure out that since his body needs, let us say, iron, and since tomatoes, oranges, spinach and the like, supply iron in liberal amounts it is up to him to eat these foods, even at the cost of learning to like something he has never eaten before."

All of this holds a direct interest for the farmer, especially the trucker. It is worth noting that where the Red Cross nutritionist has spent some time, grocers commonly report a growing demand for vegetables throughout the town, and they often complain that they have to "get in stuff" they had not carried before.

Thousands of people, both school children and their parents, learn the principles of food selection through the aid of the Red Cross nutritionist. Her work is among those services made possible by the support of the membership in the Red Cross. Enrollment of Red Cross membership, by the way, begins this year November 11 and continues through November 27.

Dear old Fletcher:
I missed that address of yours when you delivered it to the School Superintendents here and I certainly enjoyed reading it in your October issue of Fletcher's Farming. It is just like you, so mellow and refreshing. More of this and there would be no misunderstanding between teachers and editors and the two great educational agencies could have a lot more fun as they go about their business of making the world better.

I believe Mrs. Bentley is going to have us a good program at the State meeting of the Agricultural Workers Association and in this way get a little more pep into our organization.

With kindest regards to yourself and family, I am,

ADVISES THE AMERICAN RED CROSS:--

PREVENT THAT COLD.

An Ounce of Prevention Is Worth a Pound of Cure—And Is Much Cheaper.

Prevent that cold. If you feel it coming on, or if everyone else in the house has one and you are sure that it will be your turn next, tear a leaf from grandmother's one note-book and prevent it.

When grandfather came home with a cold, grandmother rushed quickly for lemons and made a real big lemonade. She didn't know why lemons were good for colds, but she knew they were—and her old fashioned remedy produced results.

Now the scientific reason has been discovered. Doctors tell us that not only is it beneficial to take a hot lemonade before retiring to make one perspire and rid the body of toxic substances, but that lemonade should be taken several times during the day as well.

The reason this practice should be followed is that lemons have an alkaline reaction in the body. More and more is the fact becoming appreciated that lemons and oranges, though acid by taste, have a final alkaline reaction which is most effective in helping to maintain the normal alkaline balance of the body.

Authorities claim that an acidosis caused from the lowering of the alkaline balance is present with every common cold and that its correction is the quickest and most effective way of curing a cold. This means that we must eliminate or greatly reduce for a while our consumption of acid-forming foods such as bread, cereals, meat, eggs, fish and fowl and use the alkaline-forming foods such as milk, fruits, fruit juices and vegetables in goodly quantity.

Do not by any means understand that one should entirely eliminate acid forming foods from the diet for a long period. Our most common and many very essential foods are acid-producers but absolutely necessary on account of their valuable protein and carbohydrate content. It merely means that when a cold is present or apparently due to arrive, we must make our body more alkaline as quickly as possible by eliminating or reducing these acid-producing foods for a brief period, and eating heavily of the alkaline producing foods.

Preventing a cold, however, is much easier than curing one—particularly one that is deep-seated and needs the attention of a skilled physician.

Add to the old-fashioned lemon cure of grandmother, a little strongly alkaline bicarbonate of soda, and you have a preventive that is very inexpensive yet very efficient. Squeeze the juice of a lemon in a half glass of water, add half a teaspoon of soda and drink it immediately. Repeat at least three times during the day, and if you wish, a final glass of old-fashioned hot lemonade may be taken before retiring.

Such a goodly quantity of alkaline producing beverage should prove sufficient to ward off the cold that you anticipate. Furthermore, even though a cold is not threatening, you have placed your body in such shape that one will find it difficult to take root for some time.

KOCH-GARTEISER.

The marriage of Miss Cecelia Gartaiser to Mr. Raymond Koch was solemnized at 8:30 Wednesday morning at a Nuptial High Mass, in St. John's Catholic Church, Rev. Father T. J. Flynn performing the impressive marriage rite. The bride, dressed in a lovely brown canton crepe frock with accessories to match and carrying an arched bouquet of white carnations, entered on the arm of her father, Mr. Emil Gartaiser, who gave his daughter in marriage. Bridesmaids were Misses Cornelia Koch and Lucine Finger, wearing charming models of cricket green and navy blue crepe, respectively, and carrying bouquets of pink carnations. Marshal Koch and Thomas Finger were groomsmen. Miss Dorothy Zerr played the wedding march for the bridal party, and the choir sang during the ceremony.

Immediately following the ceremony, a sumptuous wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Gartaiser, for the bridal party and the immediate family of the bride and groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Koch left for a short wedding trip, after which they will be at home in apartments at the Gartaiser residence.

The bride is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Gartaiser and Mr. Koch is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Toby Koch of Hondo. Mr. Koch is engaged in farming. Their many friends wish them a prosperous and happy future.
